The Archives and Special Collections serve two functions:

The Wheaton College Archives seeks to document the history of Wheaton College (1860 to the present) and its predecessor, the Illinois Institute (1853-1859) through administrative records, photographs, audio and video recordings, and other materials that document the academic life and culture of Wheaton. The Archives serves as a major information source on people, publications, and events associated with Wheaton College.

The Special Collections supports the curriculum of the College by providing rare and primary resources for faculty, student, and general research. Specifically, the Special Collections collects, preserves, and presents materials in all formats related to the life and work of significant adherents to the Christian faith in the modern world, with the goal of strengthening and broadening the College's tradition of academic excellence and the integration of faith and learning in scholarly endeavor that issues in servant ministry.

One of the major monograph collections is the Evangelism and Missions Collection (the holdings of the former Billy Graham Center Library). The collection contains published materials on Christian evangelism and missions. The collection is international in scope with a special emphasis on North American evangelical efforts. Due to their rarity, uniqueness, or value, items housed in the Archives & Special Collections do not circulate. Everyone is invited, however, to use the materials in our Special Collections or Manuscripts Reading Room.
